Promoting Positive Behaviour in Children

Who is this intervention for?

This intervention is designed for parents/carers to increase their skills to promote positive and helpful behaviours in their child.

How can this support help parents/carers?

We help parents/carers to develop confidence in parenting their child by sharing various techniques that support the management of challenging behaviours. We will work together and guide you to understand and implement strategies to support your child with their emotions. The skills learnt are transferrable and applicable to future challenges.

Why do we work with parents/carers rather than the child?

- Research shows that working with parents/carers is just as effective as working with the child
- The same positive outcomes can be seen in fewer sessions
- Parents/carers know their children best and are best placed to implement changes
- Parents/carers are more motivated than children to make changes as they are more likely to focus on long-term gain

- Families tell us they want to be able to manage their child's difficulties within the family and the child does not want to be made to feel 'different'
- Parents/carers are more likely to be able to remember and implement strategies in the future

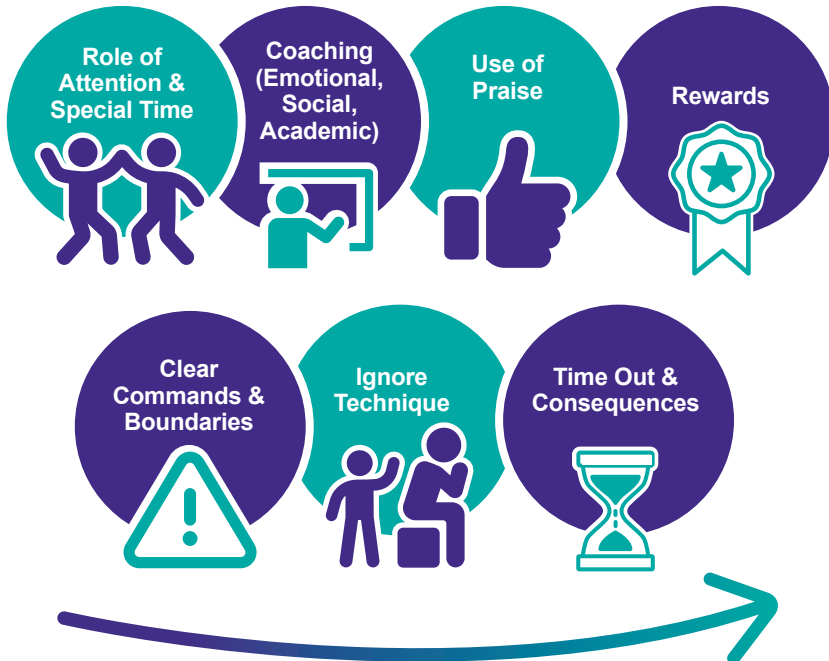

What age range is this intervention suitable for?

This intervention is most effective with parents/carers of children between the ages of 4 and 8 years old.

What will we cover?

This intervention is most effective with parents/carers of children between the ages of 4 and 8 years old.

How many sessions do I need to attend?

You will attend an initial assessment where we will explore your child's current difficulties, your child may also be invited to attend with you. If this intervention is appropriate, we will typically offer 6 - 8 sessions which are attended by parent/carer only. Each session lasts for 1 hour and can be either face-to-face at your child's school or online.

What tools will I need?

You will need to be committed to attending regular appointments, reading outside of sessions, and completing activities with your child. Helpful reading resource: "The Incredible Years: A trouble-shooting guide for parents of children aged 3-8 years" by Webster-Stratton 2019. There are a few editions (including an audio version) of the book, and each have a slightly different cover – any are fine to use!

How can I access support?
